VERIFIED SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE COMPLAINT

Plaintiff William OConnor ("Plaintiff"), by and through his undersigned attorneys, brings this derivative complaint for the benefit of nominal defendant Upstart Holdings, Inc. ("Upstart" or the "Company"), against its Board of Directors (the "Board") and certain of its executive officers seeking to remedy the Individual Defendants' (defined below) breaches of fiduciary duties and violations of federal law. Plaintiff alleges the following based upon personal knowledge as to himself and his own acts, and information and belief as to all other matters, based upon, inter alia, the investigation conducted by and through Plaintiff's attorneys, which included, among other things, a review of publicly available documents concerning Upstart, transcripts of conference calls with analysts, announcements concerning the Company, filings with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”), press releases issued by, and regarding, Upstart, legal filings, news reports, securities analysts’ reports about the Company, and other publicly available information.

NATURE OF THE ACTION

1. This is a shareholder derivative action brought on behalf of Upstart against certain officers and members of the Company’s Board for breaches of their fiduciary duties to the Company and its shareholders as set forth below.

2. Upstart is a financial technology company that uses artificial intelligence (“AI”) to underwrite personal loans predominantly to borrowers whose limited or poor credit history generally precludes them from obtaining loans from more traditional sources. The Company’s platform aggregates consumer demand for high-quality loans and connects it a network of Upstart AI-enabled bank partners. Upstart claims that its underwriting process enables banking partners to originate loans with higher approval rates and lower loss rates than traditional underwriting processes, while consumers purportedly benefit from higher approval rates and lower interest rates.

3. The Company’s fee-based business model is predicated on moving large volumes of loans through its platform and then placing the loans the Company underwrites with banks or institutional credit investors, thereby keeping loans off its balance sheet and largely insulating itself from credit risk.

4. As alleged herein, the Individual Defendants repeatedly stated that Upstart’s AI-based models could underwrite loans in a way that was superior to traditional underwriting processes and lead to the origination of less risky credit. Upstart touted the predictive capabilities of its AI technology, which would purportedly allow it to handle a recession “far better than a traditional system would.” The Company also represented that it would fund a limited amount of loans from its balance sheet only to support the research and development of new loan products, and that it would maintain limited exposure to credit risk.

5. These and similar statements were false and misleading. In reality, the Company's AI-based underwriting model was unable to adequately account for changing macroeconomic conditions, such as rising interest rates, inflation, and changes from government stimulus programs related to the Covid-19 pandemic. As a result, Upstart had been increasingly underwriting progressively less creditworthy loans, requiring the Company to fund a significant amount of loans from its balance sheet to support loan transaction volume and stabilize its business, thereby exposing Upstart to significant credit risk. As a result of the Individual Defendants' misrepresentations, Upstart securities traded at artificially inflated prices.

6. On May 9, 2022, the Company announced its financial results for the first quarter of 2022. Upstart reported that it held approximately $604 million worth of loans, notes, residuals on its balance sheet, an amount significantly higher than previous periods and more than double the $261 million that it held at the end of the previous quarter. The Company acknowledged that the significant increase in the amount of loans retained on its balance sheet was the result of rising "default rates" on loans originated in the second half of 2021 as well as "rising interest rates and rising consumer delinquencies putting downward pressure on conversion." Further, Upstart revealed that, though the Company had historically used its balance sheet "almost exclusively" for the research and development of new loan products, in the first quarter of 2022, Upstart used its balance sheet as "a market-clearing mechanism" to support the Company's loan transaction volume and stabilize its business.

7. The Company also confirmed that it had recently "loosened" its loan modification policy to make it easier for Upstart borrowers to obtain forbearance of their loan payments. This had the effect of converting the status of “delinquent” loans to “current,” and likely masked the true extent of delinquent Upstart loans. In response, Upstart cut its 2022 revenue guidance by $150 million and issued revenue guidance for the second quarter of 2022 that was well below analyst expectations. Despite Upstart’s prior statements touting its ability to handle a recession “far better than a traditional system would,” the Company attributed its weak outlook to “macro uncertainties” and “the prospect of a recession.”

8. On this news, the Company’s share price fell $43.52, or over 56%, from a closing price of $77.13 per share on May 9, 2022, to a closing price of $33.61 per share on May 10, 2022. Additionally, the price of Upstart’s Convertible Senior Notes declined by $13.37, or approximately 18.2%, based on a comparison of the last trade price on May 9, 2022 before the Company’s disclosures and the last trade price on May 10, 2022.

9. As a result of the foregoing, a securities fraud class action was filed against the Company and certain of its officers, captioned Handelsbanken Fonder AB v. Upstart Holdings, Inc., et al., Case No. 2:22-cv-02706 (S.D. Ohio) (the “Securities Action”). The Securities Action has exposed the Company to massive class-wide liability.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

10. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331 and section 27 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the “Exchange Act”), 15 U.S.C. 78aa(a), over the claims asserted herein for violations of sections 10(b) of the Exchange Act and Rule 10b-5 (17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5) promulgated thereunder by the SEC.

11. This Court has supplemental jurisdiction over Plaintiff’s state law claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1337(a).

12. This action is not a collusive action designed to confer jurisdiction on a court of the United States that it would not otherwise have.

13. In connection with the acts, conduct and other wrongs complained of herein, Defendants, directly or indirectly, used the means and instrumentalities of interstate commerce, the United States mail, and the facilities of a national securities market.

SUBSTANTIVE ALLEGATIONS

Background

52. Founded in 2012, Upstart purports to leverage the power of AI to more accurately quantify the true risk of a loan by targeting fee optimization, income fraud, acquisition targeting, loan stacking, prepayment prediction, identity fraud and time-delimited default prediction. The Company aims to enable lenders to approve more loans with fewer defaults than traditional underwriting processes. The Company went public through an initial public offering on December 16, 2020.

53. Through its online lending marketplace, the Company partners with banks and credit unions to provide personal and auto loans ranging from $1,000 to $50,000, at annual percentage rates typically ranging from 6.5% to 35.99% over three to seven years. The Company's AI models utilizes non-conventional sources of risk quantification, such as education and employment, to assess default risk, and look beyond the traditional FICO-based lending model.

54. Upstart's revenue is primarily comprised of fees paid by banks. Specifically, the Company charges banks referral fees for each loan referred through its website and originated by a bank partner, platform fees for each loan originated, regardless of its source, and loan servicing fees as consumers repay their loans.

55. Loans underwritten by Upstart, referred to as "Upstart-powered loans," are either: (1) retained by its originating bank partner; (2) distributed to the Company's base of institutional investors and buyers that invest in Upstart-powered loans; or (3) in some instances, funded by Upstart's balance sheet. For the year ended December 31, 2021, 16% of the loans funded through the Company's platform were retained by the originating bank, while 80% of loans were purchased by institutional investors through the Company's loan funding programs. Upstart seeks to place all loans with banks or institutional investors, thereby keeping loans off its balance sheet and limiting its exposure to credit risk. The Company maintains that it generally holds loans on its balance sheet until it can contribute them into term securitization transactions or otherwise liquidate them, only occasionally holding some loans on its balance sheet indefinitely. The Company's fee-based business model, as well as its ability to improve its machine learning algorithms, depends on its ability to increase loan volumes.

Defendants' False and Misleading Statements

56. On March 17, 2021, the Company hosted an earnings call with investors and analysts in connection with its fiscal fourth quarter and fiscal year 2020 results. During the call, Defendant Girouard, the Company's co-founder and CEO, explained that "Upstart is a fee-based business" that "do[es not] make loans," and assured investors that "we aren't exposed to material balance sheet risk." Girouard touted the ability of Upstart's AI model to target default risk as "the centerpiece of our system" because "[i]t predicts not just the likelihood that a loan will default, but when that default can be expected to happen" thereby offering advantages to the Company's lending partners in the form of "higher approval rates, lower loss rates and a highly automated digital experience" and "enables lending programs that are more predictable, more profitable, and more inclusive."

57. Also during the call, Defendant Datta, the Company's CFO, stated that Upstart carried an aggregate balance of loans, notes, and residuals of $98 million on its balance sheet at the end of 2020, down from $266 million at the end of 2019, purportedly reflecting the Company's

“continued reduction in the percentage of platform loans funded through [Upstart’s] balance sheet.” In response to an analyst’s question about securitizations of loans underwritten by Upstart, Datta represented that the Company’s pipeline “is as good as it’s ever been with respect to demand for loans on the funding side” and “funding has not been an obstacle to [the Company’s financial results] in any way.”

58. On May 11, 2021, Upstart announced its financial results for the first quarter of 2021 and hosted an earnings call with analysts and investors. During the earnings call, Girouard assured investors that the Company’s rapid growth was sustainable because it is “primarily technology and model-driven, which manifests as increasing conversion rates in our borrower funnel.” Datta then highlighted that the Company’s aggregate balance of loans, notes, and residuals had decreased to $73.2 million from $227.5 million at the end of the same quarter in the prior year, and reassured investors of Upstart’s trend of a “continuing reduction in the percentage of platform loans funded through our own balance sheet.” Girouard also touted various upgrades that Upstart had made to its AI models during the quarter, stating that “[t]his upgrade led to higher approval rates and lower interest rates which, of course, translates into more loans.” In response to an analyst’s question about how the model upgrades translated into higher conversion rates for the Company, Girouard explained that Upstart’s model “gets smarter about separating good credits from bad credits” and “[i]t thereby helps us avoid offering loans to those who are more likely to default and the effect of that, which is the most basic sort of building block of our business, is that it allows us to approve more people at generally lower rates.”

59. On June 9, 2021, during the Bank of America Global Technology Conference, Girouard represented that because Upstart’s “revenue is almost entirely fees paid to [the Company] by banks not subject to claw-backs,” the Company’s ability to generate revenue is not “anything related to quality of credit performance.” In response to an analyst’s question about how Upstart would be able to respond to a credit cycle, Girouard represented that “[c]redit quality is the sort of true north of the company” and Upstart’s model will handle “disruptions in the economy” and a “recession far better than a traditional system would” because “[i]t can very quickly adjust itself to handle the macro situation that is evolving out there.” Furthermore, Girouard contended that Upstart had “a great proof point that a model like ours actually can handle disruptions in the economy and dislocations better than a standard model.”

60. On August 10, 2021, the Company announced its financial results for the second quarter of 2021. During the Company’s earnings call with analysts that day, Defendant Girouard touted that Upstart’s “more powerful algorithms and growth in training data led to a boost in approval rate and a more accurate system overall” and “continued to drive separation between our AI-powered platform and more conventional lending systems.”

61. During the August 10, 2021, earnings call, Datta discussed the state of the Company’s balance sheet, stating that, “[i]n terms of loan assets, [Upstart] carried an aggregate balance of loans, notes, and residuals of $95.3 million,” up from $73.2 million in the first quarter of 2021, but down from $148 million at the end of the same quarter in the previous year. Datta reassured investors that “these loan assets represent the totality of the direct exposure we have to credit risk.”

62. On September 9, 2021, Defendant Girouard attended the Deutsche Bank Technology Conference. At the conference, Girouard touted the application of Upstart’s AI-based technology as “a Holy Grail of credit and lending,” stating that the Company was “developing models for credit origination that are more accurately measuring risk than the legacy systems, which tend to be FICO centric” and are therefore “able to approve more borrowers at lower rates and actually, lower loss rates.” Regarding Upstart’s exposure to credit risk, Girouard again assured investors that “we don’t take risk in the loans” because “we aren’t in any sense a lender ourselves,” but rather “[w]e provide a toolset to banks to originate credit and charge them fees to use it.” Further, in response to an analyst’s question about the competitive advantages of Upstart’s platform, Girouard presented the Company’s “product that can approve more borrowers at lower loss rates” as “a fairly magical thing” because its “AI-based system is [ ] always getting better” and “we’re getting more sophisticated AI as we go and our model is inevitably getting more accurate as time goes by.”

63. On November 9, 2021, Upstart announced its financial results for the third quarter of 2021 and hosted an earnings call with analysts and investors. During the earnings call, Datta noted that the aggregate balance of loans, notes, and residuals on the Company’s balance sheet had increased to $140 million, up from $95.3 million in the previous quarter, but still down from $145 million at the end of the same quarter the previous year. Datta claimed that the reason the “dollar volume of loans we carry is edging upwards” was the Company’s “use [of] our balance sheet to support the scaling of our growing auto product, as well as our expansion into the lower credit score segments of personal lending.” In response to an analyst question about demand to fund Upstart-powered loans, Girouard represented that the Company would remain largely insulated from credit risk by quickly placing loans with its partners because Upstart has “[a] lot of banks who are originating loans for their own balance sheets” as well as “banks that are selling through to 100-plus, 150-plus capital markets, partners,” creating a “very liquid environment.” Datta assured investors that “even when we’re past the current . . . distortion in the market, we’ll be in pretty good shape with respect to demand.”

64. On February 15, 2022, Upstart reported financial results for the fourth quarter and full year ended December 31, 2021. During the Company’s earnings call with analysts that day, Datta assured investors that while the Company was “cognizant of the fluidity in the macro environment,” it was “not expecting any meaningful adverse impact from rising defaults on our volumes or economics” because “[i]t’s not . . . a longer term . . . increase in default profile.” Datta reported that the balance of loans, notes, and residuals on the Company’s balance sheet had skyrocketed to $261 million, up from $140 million in the previous quarter, and claimed that the increase “reflect[ed] the accelerated pace of [research and development]” and was the result of the Company’s reinvestment of $170 million “in the form of loans made in support of new [research and development] programs.” Despite the increase in loans retained on the Company’s balance sheet, Upstart reported to investors that it expected to generate revenue of $1.4 billion in 2022.

65. On March 9, 2022, during the Morgan Stanley Media and Telecom Conference, Girouard touted the Company’s ability to successfully navigate a downturn in the economy. Specifically, Girouard stated that “volatility and turbulence . . . is an environment that we shine in” and “more noise, more volatility ends up being a good thing for us as a company because we can handle it, manage it better than others,” particularly since “we’re a very lightweight company” with a “small balance sheet.” Girouard then assured investors that “we’re a company that thrives in this type of environment and we will, without question, come out stronger on the other side.”

66. The above statements about Upstart’s limited exposure to credit risk and business, operations, and prospects, including its 2022 guidance, were materially false and/or misleading. In truth, Upstart’s AI-based underwriting model could not adequately account for macroeconomic factors such as rising interest rates and inflation, nor the expiration of the U.S. government stimulus related to the COVID-19 pandemic. As a result, the Company had been increasingly underwriting progressively less creditworthy loans. Weakening delinquency and default trends on Upstart-powered loans caused demand from credit investors and the securitization market to decline, which negatively impacted Upstart’s conversion rate. Consequently, Upstart’s use of its balance sheet to fund loans and support volume rendered the Company significantly more exposed to credit risk.

The Truth Emerges

67. The truth emerged on May 9, 2022, when Upstart announced its financial results for the first quarter of 2022. The Company revealed that the balance of loans, notes, and residuals held on the Company’s balance sheet had more than doubled in just one quarter, from approximately $261 million for the period ended December 31, 2021, to more than $604 million for the period ended March 31, 2022.

68. During the Company’s earnings call with analysts and investors held that day, Girouard admitted that Upstart “observed more volatility” for loans funded by institutional investors and capital markets participants, which he attributed to “the abrupt termination of [COVID-19-related government stimulus] programs [which] caused some of the more recent vintages to underperform.” Datta acknowledged that the significant increase in the amount of loans retained on the Company’s balance sheet was the result of rising “default rates” on loans originated in the second half of 2021 and stated that “the macro environment has become an increasing headwind to growth this past quarter, with both rising interest rates and rising consumer delinquencies putting downward pressure on conversion.” Datta further revealed that, though the Company had historically used its balance sheet “almost exclusively for the purposes of [research and development]” of new loan products, such as auto lending and new segments of personal lending, in the first quarter of 2022, Upstart funded loans using its own balance sheet as “a market-clearing mechanism” to support the Company’s loan transaction volume and stabilize its business.

69. On the May 9, 2022, earnings call, Datta also reported that the Company had recently “loosened” its loan modification policy to make it easier for Upstart borrowers to obtain forbearance of their loan payments. Looser forbearance standards, which effectively converts the status of some “delinquent” loans to “current,” likely masked the true extent of delinquencies on Upstart-powered loans, which will likely continue to trend higher and put even more downward pressure on Upstart’s conversion rate and business model.

70. The Company also slashed its full year revenue guidance for 2022 by $150 million, from $1.4 billion to $1.25 billion, citing “macro uncertainties” and “the prospect of a recession.” Further, in providing guidance for the second quarter of 2022, the Company announced a disappointing expected revenue range of $295 million to $305 million, or roughly $35 million below analysts’ expectations.

71. On this news, the Company’s stock price declined by $43.52 per share, or more than 56%, from a closing price of $77.13 per share on May 9, 2022, to a closing price of $33.61 per share on May 10, 2022. Additionally, the price of Upstart’s Convertible Senior Notes declined by $13.37, or approximately 18.2%, based on a comparison of the last trade price on May 9, 2022 before the Company’s disclosures and the last trade price on May 10, 2022.

72. Analysts reacted harshly to the negative news. On May 10, 2022, during an interview with Defendant Girouard, CNBC’s Jim Cramer stated that he was “shocked at the . . . potentially bad loans on [Upstart’s] balance sheet,” describing it as “certainly ill-advised to have that many loans on [the Company’s] balance sheet” and explaining that “a lot of the bankers tell me it was because [Upstart] couldn’t get rid of them.”

73. A May 10, 2022, report by Wedbush Securities noted that “[w]hile the Company claims that its decision to keep more loans on-balance sheet was used as a market clearing mechanism due to interest rate moves, we see this as a divergence from its capital-light business model and could indicate [Upstart] has few alternatives other than to hold more loans due to funding issues.”

74. In a subsequent report issued on May 13, 2022, Wedbush Securities further noted that Upstart had adopted significant changes to its loan modification policy, which led to a material increase in Upstart’s loan modifications from March to April 2022, and “these increases in loan modifications could be enough to avoid tripping early triggers in the near term since delinquent borrowers who opt-in to the loan modification program are reclassified to ‘current’ status.”

75. Significantly, during the period of wrongdoing described herein, five of the Director Defendants sold Company stock at artificially inflated prices while in possession of material non-public Company information. These sales are detailed below as follows:

- a. On November 19, 2021, Defendant Cassidy sold 5,000 shares of the Company’s stock for proceeds of over $1.05 million.
- b. On November 11, 2021, Defendant Terry sold 60,000 shares of the Company’s stock for proceeds of over $16.06 million.
- c. On November 15, 2021, Defendant Hentges sold 30,000 shares of the Company’s stock for proceeds of over $7.37 million.
- d. Between August 2021 and March 2022, Defendant Girouard, directly and through the Girouard Revocable Trust, sold over 1.15 million shares of the Company’s stock for proceeds of over $207.59 million.
- e. Between August 2021 and March 2022, Defendant Gu sold 506,000 shares of the Company’s stock for proceeds of over $143.63 million.

76. As a direct and proximate result of the Individual Defendants’ misconduct, the Company has incurred and will continue to incur significant financial losses, including but not limited to, the costs of defending and potentially paying class wide liability in the Securities Action. These damages also include the costs of remediating deficiencies in the Company's internal controls, compensation and benefits paid to the Individual Defendants, who breached their duties to Upstart, and reputational harm and loss of goodwill.

DERIVATIVE AND DEMAND FUTILITY ALLEGATIONS

77. Plaintiff brings this action derivatively in the right and for the benefit of the Company to redress injuries suffered and to be suffered as a direct and proximate result of the breaches of fiduciary duties by the Individual Defendants.

78. Upstart is named solely as a nominal party in this action. This is not a collusive action to confer jurisdiction on this Court that it would otherwise not have.

79. Plaintiff is a current shareholder of Upstart and was a continuous shareholder of the Company during the period of the Individual Defendants' wrongdoing alleged herein. Plaintiff will adequately and fairly represent the interests of the Company in enforcing and prosecuting its rights and retained counsel competent and experienced in derivative litigation.

80. At the time this action was commenced, the eight Director Defendants comprised the Upstart Board. Accordingly, Plaintiff is only required to show that four Directors cannot exercise independent objective judgment about whether to bring this action or whether to vigorously prosecute this action. As set forth below, all of the Board's eight current directors are incapable of making an independent and disinterested decision to institute and vigorously prosecute this action, including because they face a substantial likelihood of liability, and so demand on the Board to institute this action is not necessary because such a demand would have been a futile act.

81. The Director Defendants, together and individually, violated and breached their fiduciary duties of candor, good faith, and loyalty. Specifically, the Director Defendants knowingly approved and/or permitted the wrongs alleged herein and participated in efforts to conceal those wrongs. The Director Defendants authorized and/or permitted the false statements to be disseminated directly to the public and made available and distributed to shareholders, authorized and/or permitted the issuance of various false and misleading statements, and are principal beneficiaries of the wrongdoing alleged herein, and thus, could not fairly and fully prosecute such a suit even if they instituted it.

82. The Director Defendants either knowingly or recklessly issued or caused the Company to issue the materially false and misleading statements alleged herein. The Director Defendants knew of the falsity of the misleading statements at the time they were made. As a result of the foregoing, the Director Defendants breached their fiduciary duties, face a substantial likelihood of liability, are not disinterested, and demand upon them is futile, and thus excused.

83. As members of the Board charged with overseeing the Company's affairs, each of the Director Defendants had knowledge, or the fiduciary obligation to inform themselves, of information pertaining to the Company's core operations and the material events giving rise to these claims. Specifically, as Board members of Upstart, the Director Defendants knew, or should have known, the material facts surrounding credit risk issues and the accuracy of the Company's public reporting.

84. Moreover, the Director Defendants willfully ignored, or recklessly failed to inform themselves of, the obvious problems with the Company's internal controls, practices, and procedures, and failed to make a good faith effort to correct the problems or prevent their recurrence.

85. Defendants Terry, Hentges, and O'Kelly are not disinterested or independent, and therefore, are incapable of considering a demand because they serve as members of the Audit Committee and, pursuant to the Audit Committee Charter, were specifically charged with the responsibility to assist the Board in fulfilling its oversight responsibilities related to, inter alia, credit risk issues and public disclosure requirements. Throughout the relevant time period, however, these Defendants breached their fiduciary duties to the Company by failing to prevent, correct, or inform the Board of the issuance of material misstatements and omissions regarding credit risk issues and the adequacy of the Company's internal controls as alleged above. Therefore, Defendants Terry, Hentges, and O'Kelly cannot independently consider any demand to sue themselves for breaching their fiduciary duties to the Company, as that would expose them to substantial liability and threaten their livelihood.

86. Notably, Defendants Cassidy, Hentges, Terry, Girouard, and Gu sold large amounts of Company stock while it was trading at artificially inflated prices due to the false and misleading statements alleged herein, and while in possession of material non-public Company information.

87. Additionally, each of the directors received payments, benefits, stock options, and other emoluments by virtue of their membership on the Board and their control of the Company. Indeed, all of the Director Defendants benefitted directly from the wrongdoing alleged herein. Specifically, the Director Defendants benefitted from the artificial inflation of the price of the Company's stock and the resulting increase in the value of Upstart stock and stock options they held.

88. The Director Defendants, as members of the Board, were and are subject to the Company's Code of Ethics. The Director Defendants violated the Code of Ethics because they knowingly or recklessly engaged in and participated in making and/or causing the Company to make the materially false and misleading statements alleged herein. Because the Director Defendants violated the Code of Ethics, they face a substantial likelihood of liability for breaching their fiduciary duties, and therefore demand upon them is futile.

89. Furthermore, demand in this case is excused because the Director Defendants derive substantial revenue from the Company, control the Company, and are indebted to each other, precluding the Director Defendants from adequately monitoring the Company's operations and internal controls and calling into question the Individual Defendants' conduct. Thus, any demand on the Director Defendants would be futile.

90. Significantly, the Director Defendants have not taken remedial action to redress the conduct alleged herein.

91. The Director Defendants' conduct described herein and summarized above could not have been the product of legitimate business judgment as it was based on bad faith and intentional, reckless, or disloyal misconduct. Thus, none of the directors can claim exculpation from their violations of duty pursuant to the Company's charter. As a majority of the directors face a substantial likelihood of liability, they are self-interested in the transactions challenged herein. They cannot be presumed to be capable of exercising independent and disinterested judgment about whether to pursue this action on behalf of the shareholders of the Company. Accordingly, demand is excused as being futile.

92. The acts complained of herein constitute violations of fiduciary duties owed by Upstart's officers and directors, and these acts are incapable of ratification.

93. The Director Defendants may also be protected against personal liability for their acts of mismanagement and breaches of fiduciary duty alleged herein by directors' and officers' liability insurance if they caused the Company to purchase it for their protection with corporate funds i.e., monies belonging to the stockholders of Upstart. If there is a directors' and officers' liability insurance policy covering the Director Defendants, it may contain provisions that eliminate coverage for any action brought directly by the Company against the Director Defendants, known as, inter alia, the “insured-versus-insured exclusion.” As a result, if the Director Defendants were to sue themselves or certain officers of Upstart, there would be no directors’ and officers’ insurance protection. Accordingly, the Director Defendants cannot be expected to bring such a suit. On the other hand, if the suit is brought derivatively, as this action is brought, such insurance coverage, if such an insurance policy exists, will provide a basis for the Company to effectuate a recovery. Thus, demand on the Director Defendants is futile and, therefore, excused.

94. If there is no directors’ and officers’ liability insurance, then the directors will not cause Upstart to sue the Defendants named herein, since, if they did, they would face a large uninsured individual liability. Accordingly, demand is futile in that event as well.

95. Thus, for all of the reasons set forth above, all of the directors cannot consider a demand with disinterestedness and independence. Consequently, a demand upon the Board is excused as futile.

COUNT I

Against The Individual Defendants For Violations of § 10(b) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78(j), and Rule 10b-5, 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5

96. Plaintiff incorporates by reference and realleges each and every allegation contained above, as though fully set forth herein.

101. The Individual Defendants, by virtue of their receipt of information reflecting the true facts of Upstart, their control over, and/or receipt and/or modification of Upstart's allegedly materially misleading statements, and/or their associations with the Company which made them privy to confidential proprietary information concerning Upstart, participated in the fraudulent scheme alleged herein.

102. As a result of the foregoing, the market price of Upstart common stock was artificially inflated during the relevant time period. In ignorance of the falsity of the statements, stockholders, including Plaintiff, relied on the statements described above and/or the integrity of the market price of Upstart common stock in purchasing Upstart common stock at prices that were artificially inflated as a result of these false and misleading statements and were damaged thereby.

103. In addition, as a result of the wrongful conduct alleged herein, the Company has suffered significant damages, including the costs and expenses incurred in defending itself in the Securities Action and reputational harm. The Individual Defendants, through their violation of § 10(b) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b), and Rule 10b-5, 17 C.F.R. §240.10b-5, have exposed the Company to millions of dollars in potential class-wide damages in the Securities Action.

COUNT II

Against The Individual Defendants For Breach Of Fiduciary Duty

104. Plaintiff incorporates by reference and realleges each and every allegation contained above, as though fully set forth herein.

106. The Individual Defendants violated and breached their fiduciary duties of care, loyalty, reasonable inquiry, and good faith.

107. The Individual Defendants engaged in a sustained and systematic failure to properly exercise their fiduciary duties. Among other things, the Individual Defendants breached their fiduciary duties of loyalty and good faith by permitting the use of inadequate practices and procedures to guide the truthful dissemination of Company news to the investing public and to the Company's shareholders, allowing or permitting false and misleading statements to be disseminated in the Company's SEC filings and other disclosures and, otherwise failing to ensure that adequate internal controls were in place regarding the serious business reporting issues and deficiencies described above. These actions could not have been a good faith exercise of prudent business judgment to protect and promote the Company's corporate interests.

108. As a direct and proximate result of the Individual Defendants' failure to fulfill their fiduciary obligations, the Company has sustained significant damages.

109. As a result of the misconduct alleged herein, the Individual Defendants are liable to the Company. As a direct and proximate result of the Individual Defendants' breach of their fiduciary duties, the Company has suffered damage, not only monetarily, but also to its corporate image and goodwill. 115. The Individual Defendants either benefitted financially from the improper conduct, or received bonuses, stock options, or similar compensation from Upstart that was tied to the performance or artificially inflated valuation of Upstart, or received compensation that was unjust in light of the Individual Defendants' bad faith conduct.

116. Furthermore, as alleged above, Defendants Cassidy, Terry, Hentges, Girouard, and Gu engaged in insider sales of Company stock while in possession of material non-public information during the period the Individual Defendants' false and misleading statements and omissions caused Upstart's stock price to trade at artificially inflated rates.

117. Plaintiff, as a shareholder and a representative of Upstart, seeks restitution from the Individual Defendants and seeks an order from this Court disgorging all profits, benefits and other compensation procured by the Individual Defendants due to their wrongful conduct and breach of their fiduciary and contractual duties.
